

Twelve reasons why you should explore Selinda

Home to some of the largest herds of elephant and buffalo left in Southern Africa, Botswana's Selinda is a moody wilderness and one of the best places to see the African wild dog.

Selinda is a private game reserve which is focused around the Selinda Spillway - which runs from east to west - connecting the Okavango Delta with the Linyanti regions, before venturing into the Savute Marsh. If you're planning a Botswana safari, here are 12 reasons why you should visit Selinda:

We heard lions calling from our tent our last morning at #selindacamp we got in the truck and drove 500 meters from camp and spotted this young male. #worldlionday #lion #lions #tau #selinda #greatplainsconservation #botswana #safari #africa @greatplainsconservation @beverlyjoubert @micatosafarisuk #micatosafaris

One of my favourite pictures from my stay at Selinda Camp. There were two females that had cubs and as you can see they are different ages but loved to play together! #bots50photo #lioncubs #selindacamp A photo posted by @joanneshacks on Sep 6, 2016 at 12:32am PDT

Brothers for life 💎💎 We followed these boys the whole morning as they went on a mission to mark their territory and chase away two intruders. There's so much big cats action going on here at Selinda 💎💎 A photo posted by NIEDblog.de (@niedblog) on Aug 30, 2016 at 2:41am PDT

Yesterday we had a once-in-a-lifetime encounter with this beautiful female leopard that we kept following for more than 3 hours while she started stalking several impalas (without luck) and eventually came together with her two cubs. The whole game drive was magical but this leopard silhouette during another spectacular sunset here at Selinda Reserve was just epic ♥
