Since the onset of Covid in 2019, businesses around the world have had to pivot, change direction, change course and adapt to the new normal. This has had seismic effects on services, staff, structure and sustainability.

As a business leader, what are your pain points?

- How will you not only survive but flourish?
- How do you make sure you have the right team?
- And if you do, how do you ensure their wellbeing?
- Is staff retention of top talent a concern?
- Do you have a diversity and inclusion strategy? Is it being implemented?
- Is your company culture resulting in a dynamic work environment and business growth?
- Is your digital transformation programme on track?

Key to managing these concerns in each organisation is the human resources team, as the crucial link between staff and management, they provide advice and guidance about how best to function optimally while managing expectations – in the best interests of the company and employees.

At the Future of HR Summit last year, Marc Privett, GM at Simplify, emphasised that success requires a clear strategy from the top – which includes the ability to mobilise a team in challenging times as well as the ability to adapt and embrace digital transformation.

What are the major pillars that should be at the core of your HR strategy? The Top HR digimag brings you the seven megatrends to watch out for:

- Leadership
