

Get 100% comfortable with strategy: experience Strategy Unplugged

Issued by Stratplanning

5 May 2014

Strategy Unplugged is the new and updated one-day strategic planning workshop hosted by Sid Peimer of Stratplanning. You are encouraged to 'hang on tight' as this one-day course promises to disrupt everything you thought you knew about strategy. You will discover a new perspective that will allow you to embrace strategy more fully, adding value and - dare we say - enjoying the process.

This course bridges the gap between the textbook and the boardroom table. It does not conflict with existing proprietary planning methodologies, but the strategic principles you will learn on the course will (appreciably) augment the planning process you currently follow. Your thinking will be a lot more strategic. A lot.

Coming to Jo'burg

Date: Wednesday, 14 May 2014

Venue: FNB Conference and Learning Centre, 114 Grayston Drive, Sandown, Sandton. Directions here.

Start: 9am sharp

Finishes: 4pm sharp

Who should attend?

- Account executives/managers/directors who want to add value to their function/business.
- Strategic planners with less than five years' experience in the planning function (or seasoned planners who'd like a fresh perspective).
- Business owners or business unit directors.
- Brand custodians who wish to develop a greater understanding of their brand's strategic options.
- Creatives who want to produce more impactful work that is still 'on strategy'.
- Other professionals who wish to evaluate a career in strategic planning.
- Those qualified in the 'hard sciences' such as engineering, who need to be able to formulate what is essentially an outcome that is 'open' as opposed to formulaic answers that science demands.

- Entrepreneurs and anyone for which strategic planning is a critical success factor.

Course outline: Completely refreshed for 2014

The course is divided into modules incorporating all the skills required to master the four-step regimen required for effective strategic planning: extract-analyse-construct-communicate.

These modules do not run sequentially, but are built on throughout the day.

Please note: there is no popping in for specific content.

Content includes:

- Loaded with case studies: LEGO - from near bankruptcy to stardom, iPod vs Walkman, the Microsoft Zune, Lion Lager (don't mention the beer), Zima, BN, TomTom, the Belgium Coke incident, Robin Hood and more...
- The (somewhat sordid) evolution of modern strategic planning
- Strategic planning schools of thought
- Vacansopapurosophobia
- The business, marketing and communications strategy
- The crucial role of problem definition
- The relationship between goals, objectives, strategies and tactics (untangling the mess)
- And plans? Where do they fit it?
- The currency of Shopper Marketing: Insights
- Why strategies are stories: Kamishibai
- The inverted pyramid and other communication essentials to get your strategy across
- Digital strategy overview (and why nothing has changed since Pompeii)
- Deliberate, unrealised and emergent strategies
- Occam's Razor applied to: Consumer Based Brand Equity, Positioning and Segmentation
- Sadistic statistics
- When research goes horribly wrong
- Brand ecosystems
- Pitching for new business
- Lessons from Dr Seuss

About your facilitator

The course is facilitated by Sid Peimer. He has planned in virtually every category - from start-ups to blue chip; from prescription drugs to FMCG. He has also mentored and trained strategic planners who have made their mark in the industry today. Sid qualified in pharmacy, but woke up with a jolt to discover the creative world of advertising. The agencies he worked for before establishing Stratplanning include Grey, Leo Burnett and Ogilvy. His life reads as somewhat of an adventure novel, covering many eclectic areas: shop assistant, CEO of a chemicals company, door-to-door salesman, copywriter, creative director, national franchise manager, retail pharmacist, manufacturing pharmacist, laboratory assistant, professional actor, suntan sprayer, karate instructor, SARA-rated river guide and lecturer in marketing and consumer behaviour. He is a popular speaker and trainer for both the private, academic and NGO sectors. He is the author of The Clear Win - Pitching for new business, the strategies that work; the myths that don't - available on Amazon (only $1 on kindle!).

He lives in Cape Town, consulting and training on strategy nationwide. He writes extensively for Bizcommunity.
