Antony Russell appointed Telviva's new CTO

Telviva has appointed technology industry veteran, Antony Russell, to the role of chief technology officer, replacing previous CTO and company co-founder, Steve Davies, who sadly passed away earlier this year. In his new role, Russell will oversee the core, development as well as professional services teams within the company.

Russell is an entrepreneur, business leader and an expert IT specialist with extensive experience in the industry, including in hardware and software sales. He is also the founder of an IT infrastructure company, Clarotech, which was acquired by Logicalis in 2019.

For more, visit: https://www.bizcommunity.com