Liquid Telecom appoints new group COO

Communications services and solutions provider Liquid Telecom has named Ahmad Mokhles as its group chief operating officer, which is a new position within the group.

Source: Supplied

In his role, Mokhles will help drive operational quality across the group's 13 countries of operation, creating value for its shareholders and achieving new economies of scale.

He has over 20 years of ICT experience, having worked for some of the Middle East's and Africa's largest telecoms groups, which include Orascom, Etisalat, Ooredoo, and Airtel Africa.

Prior to joining Liquid Telecom, Mokhles served as COO for Airtel Nigeria. Before that, he served as executive vice president of consumer and digital business for Du, overseeing the company's smart city business, and has also served as CCO for Asiacell Iraq, which is part of the Ooredoo Group.

Liquid Telecom names Reshaad Sha as new CEO
12 Apr 2018

For more, visit: https://www.bizcommunity.com