

Airlink to resume flights between South Africa and Lesotho

Airlink will resume with daily scheduled air services between Johannesburg and Maseru from 29 March 2021. This follows the re-opening of Lesotho's borders and the lifting of travel restrictions that curtailed travel between the neighbouring countries while they both worked to successfully contain the spread of the coronavirus.

"After a disruption of several weeks, Airlink is looking forward to welcoming customers onto its flights that provide vital connections supporting trade, business, tourism and family ties between South Africa and the Mountain Kingdom," said Rodger Foster, Airlink CEO.

Daily return flights between the two cities provide travellers with seamless connectivity with Airlink's comprehensive network that links South African domestic and Southern African regional destinations.

Airlink's Economy Class fares include a 20kg free economy class checked-in luggage allowance plus a 15kg sporting equipment allowance.

Airlink's intra-continental Business Class service is available on selected flights operated by the airline's Embraer E-jets, with wide seats arranged in a two-plus one abreast configuration with plenty of legroom between each row. Service on these flights includes complimentary meals and beverages, a 30kg check-in luggage allowance and priority boarding.
