

Tiso Blackstar journos rake up Sanlam Financial Journalism Awards

Several Tiso Blackstar journalists received accolades at the 2018 Sanlam Financial Journalism Awards. The Financial Mail's deputy editor Sikonathi Mantshantsha received the Sanlam Journalist of the Year award for his work on Eskom.

Furthermore, Financial Mail editor Rob Rose was awarded for his reporting on financial markets and economics editor Claire Bissek and politics editor Natasha Marrian were runners-up to Mantshantsha for economics journalism. When it came to company reporting, Giulietta Talevi took home a runner-up award, while Ann Crotty did the same in the financial markets category.

Business Day property writer Alistair Anderson won the property news journalist award from the SA Property Owners Association (SAPOA), while the Financial Mail's property editor Joan Muller was the runner-up.
