WTM Africa 2018's second day showcased the extraordinary potential of Africa as a destination for travellers through its popular Speed Networking sessions. Operating at full capacity, these sessions gave exhibitors the chance to expand the reach of their product through short appointments with potential buyers.

The City of Cape Town took some of the world's top tourism industry buyers on tours of Langa and the Bo-Kaap. Says Alderman Patricia De Lille, Executive Mayor City of Cape Town: "In Langa, buyers enjoyed a walking tour of the Langa Quarter – which includes 13 streets and a nucleus of 200 homes which have been transformed into restaurants, galleries, informal bars and craft stores – followed by lunch with the locals. The Bo-Kaap experience included a visit to the Auwal

Masjid, the oldest mosque in South Africa, a stop at the oldest spice shop in the area, a visit to the Bo-Kaap Museum and a Cape Malay cooking class.”

The Sports and Events Tourism Exchange (SETE) delved into the potential of large events tourism on the African continent and how this could exponentially grow tourism’s contribution to our economy. John Robbie, Master of Ceremonies for the event, said: “There was certainly a very positive feeling around the potential of events here, the challenge will be to better share information moving ahead. We have the infrastructure and investment, now it’s about maximising on that!”

Running concurrently with WTM Africa, the African Business Travel Association (ABTA) Corporate Travel Forum highlighted the key trends, challenges and opportunities within corporate travel and allowed corporate travel professionals the chance to relay the current landscape of travel in their sector.

Select media in attendance at WTM Africa were treated to a media lunch at Maresol restaurant at the V&A Waterfront. The media also got an exclusive look at the all-new Alba Restaurant, an elegant new dining experience on the water. This 72-seater restaurant operates in the Cape Town harbour, providing refined service and cuisine.
